Seminar

Employment ... is a key part of the solution to homelessness

"What are you doing today...?"

GHN Research & Consultation Series

Finding the way: positive steps to work

29 June 2006 - Campanile Hotel - Tunnel Street - Glasgow

Seminar

Employment is a key part of the solution to homelessness. But finding the route to a sustainable place in the job market is far from easy for many people affected by homelessness. It's essential that effective employability services are in place to support the move towards finding and keeping a job.

This seminar will launch two research reports on homelessness and employability - bringing together user-led research on the diverse needs of people affected by homelessness and the way in which local Strategies respond to those needs.

Employment has an important role to play in the prevention and alleviation of homelessness, and this should be reflected in local Homelessness Strategies. SHEN will present recent research identifying the ways in which local authorities are using employability to support sustainable routes out of homelessness.

However, for these strategies to be effective they have to meet the needs of people affected by homelessness. GHN will present findings from their service user-led research on the employability background, status, needs and aspirations of people affected by homelessness. This will form a baseline measurement to support the further development of local employability services.
